Paint

There are two good reasons for painting often enough or even too often. One, to look prosperous; two, to be so. Nothing does one more credit or gives one more credit than paint, supplemented of course by what goes with it, and paint costs nothing.

Then, the first cost is $5 or $6 a gallon put on, but it saves more than that in the property, saves it from slow going down—and always slow—it jumps with a jump when water gets in on wood and iron.

Buy wood and iron coat nothing, kept dry by paint.

Better paint when it is in it. Paint costs goes down in the sense of being more profitable next year.

more than a century we were accus-

Wounds Should Be Washed Thoroughly While Waiting for Doctor to Come and Inject the Antitoxin That Can Save.

While the children amass their noisy tokens of patriotism and wheedle their fathers into the purchase of deadly fire spitting devices, mothers set their teeth to endure long hours of torture for the safety of their little ones, writes Dr. L. K. Hirschberg in Farm and Fireside. Little by little the delights of the safe and sane Fourth are being recognized, but in the meantime, while the crackers bang and blaze, it is a comfort to know that doctors have learned to deal so effectively with one of the dangers attendant upon the Fourth of July—lockjaw—that there is no need for the disease to result in death. Through lack of information, more than a thousand people in the United States die from it each year, most of them farmers and country-bred youngsters.

WOMEN CAN

How Mrs. Hurley Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased every month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, and had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world. After I had tried most every female remedy without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It deserves itself."—Mrs.

S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For sale everywhere.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it? Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., lies in the fact that wounds made by firecrackers, skyrocket and blank ca-tridges are commonly ragged and concused, and so afford a favorable soil for the germs. It is known also that wounds where free air and oxygen cannot enter, as is the case with those made by rusty nails or those accompanied by deep tearing and those in which dirt has been ground into the flesh, gunshot and powder burns, are most likely to be followed by the disease. The first symptoms of lockjaw usually appear from three days to three weeks after the injury. Home remedies and slabs of bacon hasten it. The earlier they appear, the more serious the attack.

Fortunately, it is always possible to prevent lockjaw, provided no delay follows the injury. The method is to have a doctor inject antitoxin—poison antidote—into the patient's flesh. This kills the poisons as fast as they are given off by the lockjaw germs, which are a veritable mine of poisons at the site of the sore. If treatment is delayed until lockjaw symptoms appear there is little hope of cure. It is then too late.

In the interval which may elapse before the doctor can arrive it is advisable to wash the wound thoroughly with soap and water, and to flood it before binding it up with common peroxide of hydrogen. After this has been done the wound should be covered, but on no account use a handkerchief or an old rag, but get a strip of antiseptic bandage. A package of antiseptic bandage should always be in readiness in every household. A clean open wound which bleeds freely is little likely to harbor the germs of lockjaw.

The light and air and oxygen striking into it kill them, and the flowing blood washes them out. In all such cases, unless the flow of blood is excessive, it is well to make no effort to stop it. It will cease of itself in a few moments.

The use of such homely remedies as bacon and spider webs to stop the flow is foolhardy and frequently fatal.
The average spider web, particularly if it comes from a cellar or a stable, is alive with germs. But no matter how small the wound may be it is well to have a doctor dress it. He alone is capable of washing it as it should be washed and of estimating the likelihood of infection. His fee is money well invested. It may buy only insurance against a long and terrible illness, but then again it may buy insurance against death.

WOMEN'S WOES

Bethel Women Are Finding Relief at Last

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Keeping the kidneys well has spared thousands of women much misery. Read of a remedy for kidney ills only that is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. Lohm M. Lary, Bethel, says: "I was troubled by my kidneys for several years. If I did any work, I felt tired. I suffered intensely from backache and I also had much trouble from the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me relief as soon as I began taking them."

SOME TIME LATER, Mrs. Lary said: "Doan's Kidney Pills are a mighty fine medicine and I am glad to confirm my former endorsement."

POEMS WORTH READING

FOURTH OF JULY.

Though contented we roam all the rest of the year Amid palaces over the foam, O, there is one day when American hearts Turn fondly to country and home!
The bay clad abbey and castles and towers
Are seen through a tear in the eye.
When the calendar points to that glorious date,
The Fourth of July.

We know from the pines on the Kennebec's banks
To the live oaks, in mantles of gray, On the Indian river, the land of the free
Is everywhere keeping the day.
From the walls of the mansion and cottage alike
In the breeze of summertime fly The star studded folds of the red, white and blue.
On Fourth of July.

So let the cannons and cracks and pi-tols and drums
And plowheels and rockets that soar,
With humming and hurrying and rattling and bang
And spitting and whizz and uproar, Proclaim we are glad we were born in a land
The best that is under the sky And are proud of that truly American day.

The Fourth of July.

THE JOYOUS FOURTH.
By William Gerard Chapman
Gee, don't I wish the Fourth was here!
It comes like I can't wait Until the days just catch up with That blammy red finger date.
I got a lot of fire works, Oh, more'n you could think,
A badly cannon, too, of brass, No shyness makes you blink.

The minute when I get awake,
'Tis four o'clock or so,
You bet I'll bustle in my clothes An' grab my box an' go A-kittin' out behind the barn An' light my punk-an' say!
You won't hear nothing much but noise
The rest of that whole day.

But, gosh, that ain't a circumstance To what'll happen when It gets right dark. You jest be there; You'll see some doin's, then!
We'll break in to the blacksmith's shop An' get his axels out An' about them all around the town; Then there'll be noise, don't doubt!

Afore each house we'll set one down An' pour the powder in,
An' set the other top of it—Then get our ears the din!
Hime folks'll come a-runnin' out An' raise an awful row; But mebbe laugh like fun an' shout "Jest get along, boys, now."

Oh, gee, I wish the Fourth was here!
But Ma says, "Mercy me!
Who you're as set on gettin' hurt An' blisters, I can't see."
But shucks! who cares for things like that!
A boy's Ma never learns As how he has got half o' fun A gettin' of those burns.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.
Far in the east where morning gleams And sprays its glorious light in streams
The early birds on song,
And others glad their notes probing.
I hear the carols glad and sweet;
From quaint to quaint echoes repeat And roll out to the western sea, Liberty, sweet liberty.

The answering tones of bells roll on—Lexington, Concord and Lexington.
And Charleston bells all hushers thrill With Bunker Hill! Bunker Hill!
From Haver and Yorktown come replies—Fourth of July! Fourth of July!

Ring bells! Ring bells! With joyous acclies, Tears and glad will year made tell, While o'er the land blooms forth with peace
One country, one flag, forevermore.
And grant our country may retain Her high position without stain.
In peace and virtue's triumphs may she bide.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.
Here it is the "Fourth" again!
Buck up, boys, how time does spin!
Don't seem like it's a rusty gear Since I first began to hear All the—

Nothing Better than bread and butter—when the bread is made from William Tell Flour.

Nothing more wholesome, either, or a better food for growing children, because William Tell is made from Ohio Red Winter Wheat, richest in nutritive value.
Milled by a special process, William Tell goes farther. More loaves to the sack in addition to wonderful bread making qualities.

William Tell Flour

We stirred up when we was boys, All of us a-wishin' powder Was lots cheaper and lots louder!

Recollect with what delight Used to be up half the night Helpin' fire the mill or Makin' other sounds of war!
Used to wish the earth was drilled And inside and powder-filled, And that I could somehow just Touch her off and hear her bust!

Weren't no cannon crackers then, Kind o' wish there had a-been—Then they would 'a' sounded sweet; Now they lift me off my feet.
I've begun to think that noise Was invented just for boys.
Fourth o' July don't seem to me 'T all like what it used to be.

Just as patriotic, still Somehow I don't catch the thrill Of the loud, tumultuous joy Like I used to when a boy.
Nuthin' doin' then but I Had a finger in the pie;
But that finger, as you see,
Got blowed off eventually.

POLLUTED FARM WATERS.
In selecting a country home for the summer special attention should be given to the question of a pure water supply. Farms, which are generally remote from towns, cities, or other areas of congested population, seem to be at first ideally situated for obtaining pure and wholesome water. In reality, however, polluted water is exceedingly common on farms, and typhoid fever rates are usually greater in country districts than in cities. Typhoid fever is transmitted largely in drink or food taken into the stomach and is especially likely to be communicated by polluted water obtained from shallow wells near spots where the discharge of typhoid patients have been deposit ed and subsequently carried into the wells, and it is doubtless principally this fact that makes the disease so common in farming regions.

The source of the water used on the farm are numerous—lakes, streams, springs, wells of various kinds, and reservoirs all being extensively used, although the water from lakes and streams is generally used only for stock. Much of these sources under certain conditions may yield entirely safe and satisfactory supplies, while under other conditions certain of them may be a constant menace to health.

Of the various sources of water supply the ground water is the most satisfactory for farm use, because it is least liable to pollution, and streams and ponds are the most unsatisfactory, because of the ease and frequency with which they are contaminated. Fortunately, however, they are very seldom used for drinking and domestic purposes, being utilized mainly for stock, on which the effect of slight general pollution is not serious, though some severe epidemics of disease among cattle have been traced to polluted streams. The underground supplies, whether from wells or springs, although safe in many localities, are far from being universally so, the safety depending mainly on their location and on the nature of their protection.

Many of the failures to protect adequately the water supplies used for drinking arise from a lack of knowledge of the manner in which waters circulate through the ground and of the ways in which they may become polluted. Information on these subjects should be of value, and it is with the object of supplying this information that the United States Geological Survey has published Water Supply Paper 702, on "Underground Waters for Farm Use," a copy of which may be obtained free on application to the Children's Day was observed at the church on the hill, Sunday, June 27th.

The pastor, Rev. R. E. Gilkey, gave an excellent discourse, from words found in St. Luke, 10:5. Rev. Charles Harshbarger of Portland was present and assisted in the morning and Sunday school services. The church was beautifully decorated with ferns, potted plants, and cut flowers. Special music was rendered for the occasion. The solo by Mrs. Wynne Smith, and selections by the male quartette were much appreciated by the large congregation present. A very pretty and impressive part of the program was the chattering of twelve small children, who, with their parents came forward for that part of the service. Each little child received a rose bud which seemed very fitting, and added beauty and thought to the unfolding life of the child.

Mr. Roger Loaf Grange observed Children's Day, Saturday, with an all day session, and appropriate exercises.
A pleasing program consisting of songs and recitations by the little folks was greatly enjoyed. A picnic dinner was enjoyed at the noon hour, and tea and cake followed the entertainment in the afternoon.

The new high school building which is being built to replace the one burned during the past winter, is progressing rapidly.

D. D. Berry and son, Wilmer, of

REWARDS FOR SERVICES

Secretary of the Navy Daniels presentation took place on board t

On the afternoon of Jan. 6, 1914, there were assembled on the quartermaster of the United States ship Florida in the presence of the secretary of the navy, the commander in chief of the United States Atlantic fleet, his staff, the captains and officers of vessels then in port and hundreds of their comrades of the ranks, who had shared their dangers and borne with patience months of tedious duty in a tropical climate, thirteen of the fourteen enlisted men of the navy who so distinguished themselves under fire at Vera Cruz, that they were to receive the much prized medal of honor. It was the tribute of the country, voted by that branch of the service in which they served, for their meritorious conduct when put to the severest test. In addressing our newest heroes at the presentation executive Secretary Daniels said:
"The medals presented today are tokens of a grateful country's appreciation of work nobly done, of duty well performed, of readiness to face grave danger. They are given to men who by their conduct under fire have won renown not only for themselves, but for their companions in arms, their comrades who, while hoping for opportunities for themselves, yet rejoiced in the good fortune of their shipmates in being where the fight was thickest the field of service greatest, for that is the ambition of men bearing arms.
And that is one of the most pleasing elements in the gratification we feel today—this readiness to extend the merit and the honor to all who wear the uniform."

"You know that the signal most prized in the fleet is the one flying from the flagship telling, with its letters of many colors, that something has been 'well done,' and that, while some particular one, perhaps, has won it, yet the honor is for the ship and all its crew of officers and men whose teamwork has made the winning possible."

"The blue jacket! Let us take off our hats to him in the street, for his uniform is the blue badge of courage take him by the hand, for his hand protects our homes; treat him with respect, for he rings true, and his heart is of the finest gold."

The medal of honor is the highest recognition any American can receive from his government. All fourteen who received the medal of honor received also a gratuity of $100. Thirteen of them were advanced six months ago to the next higher rating, and the fourteenth man was given permission to participate in the next examinations for warrant officer.

All fifty-two of the other enlisted men who distinguished themselves less only than those awarded the medal of honor received letters of commendation from the navy department. Sixteen were allowed to participate in the next examination for warrant officer, and forty-six were immediately advanced to the next higher rating than they then held.

Such are the substantial rewards the navy accords her heroes. These are however, symbols of recognition for services that are unusual, caused generally by circumstances we strive casually to avoid. Through the discip-sation of a protecting Providence, warsolders have had to brave the dangers of the sword, and in the annual of our history the peace hero wins distinction with the hero baptized by fire.

But before relating how Uncle Sam rewards the peace hero let us see what happens to his naval employees who acquit themselves with credit in the ordinary functions of their profession.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels presenting honor medals to thirteen sailors for bravery at Vera Cruz, Mexico. Presentation took place on board the battleship Florida at the Brooklyn navy yard. View of medal also shown.

Extended service is recognized with increased pay. Every American citizen who enlists for the second time receives a bonus of $5.50 per month in addition to the pay of his rating, and for each enlistment after the second he receives an additional bonus of $3.50 a month.

The sick in active service receive medical care without charge. Any disabled person who has served as an enlisted man in the navy for ten years and has not been discharged for misconduct may apply for aid from the surplus income of the naval pension fund, even though he may be out of the service at the time, and after twenty years of service any enlisted man disabled from sea service by reason of age or infirmity and who has not been discharged for misconduct shall be entitled to a pension equal to half of his pay or be admitted to the Naval home, Philadelphia, Pa.

After thirty years of service any enlisted man may be placed on the retired list if he desires with an income of three-quarters of his pay and allowances for rations, quarters, fuel and period of ten days or two weeks. The navy has always sought to lessen any discommodities caused a sailor or his family through his temporarily enforced absence from home. The presence of a postoffice on every large vessel not only makes possible frequent and prompt communication between ship and shore, but places at the disposition of men at sea the wonderful facilities of the postoffice department, including money orders. The navy also conducts an allotment office at Washington, and any sailor may allot a certain portion of his monthly pay to his family, deducting it from his salary, and it will be sent each month promptly. In this way the families of men on distant stations receive a monthly income as soon as if the relative were at home. Each month the navy disburses about $403,000 by this method of payment.

On board each vessel, accessible to all men in the service, the navy maintains a savings bank, conducted in all respects like a savings bank ashore. Deposits are received, and withdrawals light, amounting to $15.75 a month. For retirement all service in the navy, army or marine corps is credited.

In case of loss of life in active service the dependent relative designated as beneficiary receives such pensions as are prescribed by the law, and when disabilities are incurred in the line of duty disqualifying a man for further naval service he receives a pension allowance, regulated according to the seriousness of the injury.

Good conduct is, of course, essential to success in every walk, and, although bad conduct (non-compliance with the regulations, tardiness and slovenly deportment) can be tolerated least of all in military professions, the men who comport themselves well during two enlistments of four years each may, upon the recommendation of their respective captains, wear the good conduct medal, which carries with it $2 cents a month additional pay.

Good conduct is rewarded also with more frequent and extended leave than that allowed offenders of discipline. Leave is always granted to men with good records as frequently as conditions allow, and during the Christmas holidays it is extended over a may be made, and interest is paid at the rate of 4 per cent per annum. That the sailor is a saving man is conclusively shown by the figures, $270,077.14 being on deposit on Dec. 31 last.

Considering the hazards of the sea, the loss of life and limb is small. To those who may by extreme and heroic daring have endangered their own lives in saving or endeavoring to save the lives of others from the perils of the sea gold life saving medals may be awarded, and in cases not sufficiently distinguished to deserve recognition in gold silver medals may be bestowed.

Uncle Sam takes pretty good care of his navy boys. It will be seen from the foregoing how he rewards continuous service, good conduct, bravery under fire and heroism in peace; how he nurses in times of illness and in their old age provides comfort for those who serve him long. Many avenues to promotion, with increased compensation, are also available to all in the service. But that is rather the subject of another story. To those, however, who are interested complete information will be sent direct by the bureau of navigation at Washington or the navy recruiting station, Indianapolis, Ind.

The new and proper way to treat kidney, liver and blood ills is to remove the great cause of the trouble—disordered digestive organs (stomach, liver and bowels). This is what Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy does. It tones up the liver and stomach, relieves constipation, casts out poisonous wastes and restores right digestive action; thus the kidneys and bladder have a chance to get right and are cleansed, healed and strengthened, the blood purified. OIL-MIXED CONCRETE.

Experiments in the Department of Agriculture Demonstrate Its Value in Many Kinds of Buildings.

After extensive laboratory and service tests the department has secured results which appear to establish definitely the value of oil-mixed concrete for damp-proof construction. Detailed results of these tests, which were carried out in connection with the work of the Office of Public Roads, are contained in the new bulletin, No. 250, of the department, entitled "Oil-Mixed Portland Cement Concrete." Briefly summarized, the conclusions to be drawn from them are that the admixture of certain mineral oils in small proportions, not to exceed 10 per cent of cement used, does not lessen the tensile strength of mortar; that the decrease in the compressive strength of mortar and concrete is not serious; that concrete mixed with oil takes much longer to set hard, perhaps twice as long, but that the increase in strength is nearly as rapid in the oil-mixed material as in the plain concrete. The use of oil does not make the concrete impervious to heavy water pressure, but it does make it practically nonabsorbent under low heads.

The value of oil-mixed concrete is said to be particularly great in the construction of basement floors and walls, watering troughs, cisterns, barns, silos, and in all parts of concrete structures that are to be made damp proof.

The oil should in no case exceed 10 per cent of the weight of the cement, and for the most part 5 per cent is all that is necessary. Since a bag of cement weighs 94 pounds, 4.7 pounds of oil, or about 2 1/2 quarts, should be added for each bag of cement used in the mixture. The sand and cement should be first mixed with the proper amount of water into a stiff mortar, to which is added the correct amount of oil, and the whole mass again thoroughly mixed until all traces of oil have disappeared. Particular care should be taken to insure that the oil is thoroughly incorporated in the mixture, and the time of mixing should be practically double that when the oil is not used. For this reason a continuous mixer should not be used in oil-cement-concrete work, as it is difficult with this type of machine to increase the time of mixing sufficiently.

The kind of oil is also important, and the following technical specifications are suggested in the bulletin in order to prevent the use of certain oils which might tend to impair the strength of the mortar or the concrete.

(1) The oil shall be a fluid petroleum product and shall contain no admixture of fatty or vegetable oils.

(2) It shall have a specific gravity not greater than 0.945 at a temperature of 25 degrees C.

(3) It shall show a flash point of not less than 150 degrees C. by the closed cup method.

(4) When 250 cc. of the oil is heated in an Engler viscosimeter to 50 degrees C., and maintained at that temperature for at least three minutes, the first 100 cc. which flows out shall show a specific viscosity of not less than 10 nor more than 30.

(5) When 1 part of the oil is shaken up with 2 parts of hundredth normal caustic soda there shall be no emulsification, and upon allowing the mixture to remain quiet the two components shall rapidly separate in distinct layers.

For practical use the addition of oil will be found particularly useful in the construction of basement floors and walls. Many of these now in existence are continually damp, and such a condition may be remedied by the application of an oil-mixed mortar coat to the old surface. A mortar composed of 1 part of cement and 2 parts sand and containing 5 per cent of oil should be sufficiently nonabsorbent for this purpose.

Watering troughs and cisterns made of oil-mixed concrete should also prove of considerable practical value in the conservation of water. In the construction of barns, where oil-mixed concrete is used, the interior will be noticeably drier than when ordinary concrete is used. Owing to their durability, cleanliness, and resistance to fire, concrete barns are becoming more and more popular, but they suffer from the disadvantage that during a long beating rain the side walls are inclined to absorb much moisture, which ultimately penetrates into the interior. The addition of oil to the extent of 5 per cent of the weight of cement in the concrete used in the side walls obviates this objection. Barn floors can also be constructed in the same way with advantage. A damp-proof floor is warmer because of the lack of evaporation from its surface, and it is also more sanitary than an ordinary concrete floor because of its nonabsorbent character.

There are, of course, any number of other types of buildings and structures of all sorts in which oil-mixed concrete may be used advantageously, or, if this is not necessary, a coat of oil-mixed mortar may be applied effectively.

Attention is called, however, to the fact that extreme care in proportioning, mixing, and placing the concrete is absolutely necessary if the addition of any waterproofing agent is to be of value. The process of mixing oil with concrete has been covered by a public patent, so that any one is at liberty to use it. The methods of using this material are discussed more fully in the bulletin already mentioned.

BROILERS FOR MARKET.

Weights and Breeds of Poultry Preferred—Separate Chickens Chosen for Broilers and Feed Liberally.

Now is the time to get broilers ready for market in order to get the highest prices. Broilers are young chickens weighing from three-fourths to 2 pounds, the latter weight being the most common size. The production of broilers as a special business has been tried without success on many poultry farms in the northeastern part of this country. Broilers, however, are raised successfully and at a good profit both on poultry farms and also where only a few fowls are kept, the broilers being the cockerels which are a by-product in the raising of pullets for egg production.

The general-purpose breeds of fowls, such as the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds, and Orpingtons, produce chickens making the best broilers. These chickens should weigh from 2 to 2 1/2 pounds (live weight) at 11 to 13 weeks of age. The Leghorns are not so well adapted for broilers, as their chickens are smaller, but they make fair broilers, weighing from 1 to 2 pounds. All Leghorn cockerels, except those saved for breeding stock, should be sold as broilers, as they are not well adapted for market after passing beyond the size. White chickens make the most attractive and easily dressed broilers, as their pin feathers are not so apparent when the chickens are prepared for market. Chickens of the general-purpose breeds make good market poultry after they pass the broiler size, but many of these, especially those hatched early, are marketed to best advantage as broilers, both on account of the high price paid for broilers, and because by selling the cockerels at this age the pullets are usually given a better chance to develop.

The cockerels should be separated from the pullets as soon as the sex can be readily distinguished, the most promising chickens being saved for breeding stock. The sex is usually told by the development of the head points, tail, and general male characteristics in the cockerels, and this requires some skill and practice. The chickens selected as broilers may be forced more rapidly than those saved for breeding stock. Quick growth can be produced by dividing them into flocks of 50 or less and confining them to small pens for 14 to 18 days before they are marketed. Feed in the morning and at noon a wet mash of 6 pounds corn meal, 4 pounds low grade wheat flour, and 2 pounds bran or middlings, mixed with skim milk or buttermilk to the consistency of oatmeal porridge. If no milk is available, add 1 pound of beef scraps to the mash, and give some green feed daily, using only enough water to make a crumbly mash. In addition to either of these mash feeds, give all the cracked corn which the chickens will eat, for the evening feed.

Higher prices are paid for the early broilers, those hatched in March and April, than for those hatched in the late spring and early summer. Pullets hatched early also make the best fall and winter layers and are the most profitable to raise. Broilers are marketed both alive and dressed. Considerable care should be used in both dressing and shipping broilers so that they will reach the market in a neat, attractive condition.

WHAT IS A PLACER?

A placer is an unconsolidated deposit accumulated by mechanical processes, carrying one or more minerals in commercial quantities. All placers are secondary deposits—that is, the material of which they are composed was originally derived by erosion of bedrock. Although it is undoubtedly true that under certain conditions nuggets of placer gold have been enlarged through chemical precipitation, yet this action is a negligible quantity in placers. Placers may be derived solely by rock weathering without water sorting, but more commonly are the result of water transportation, sorting, and deposition. Many of the richest placers are those formed by the erosion of older placers and the re-concentration of their gold.

SCHOOLS.

"The Little Red School House." Now that Independence Day has been occupying the attention of the country, we are reminded that the white and blue, and the little red school house are chief among the visible signs in patriotism. As the orators have taken splendid care of the flag, let us consider the "little red school house" or more correctly speaking, the rural school. Modern day contrivances like the telephone, automobile, rural mail delivery, etc., have revolutionized country life, and the country school teacher who has a little flock of children in her care, and attempts to teach everything from the kindergarten geometry, has been called upon to defend her time-honored and sacred pedestal from the attacks of people who claim she is too old-fashioned to be continued on her job. It is pointed out that country people own automobiles and that by their use children from the wide area can be brought to a central school much more easily than by the process by which they formerly struggled to get to the crude little building which was a burden upon a few tax-

The government can do as much for the country school as it has for rural life in other directions. The suggestion which follows has never been given discussed. Here it is:

An Auto Passenger Post.
The Government rural routes, in certain districts, to be readjusted so that mail may be distributed and collected on a twice a day basis, the vehicles used being large auto motorbuses similar to what are commonly called "rubber neck wagons" in cities. The vehicles are capable of carrying from 15 to 20 passengers.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 30-45 years old, who were randomly selected from a health club. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group remained sedentary, while the exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of 30 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the control group. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can improve cardiovascular fitness and increase energy expenditure in sedentary, middle-aged women.
